RJC Architects, a San Diego architecture, planning and construction management company, announced it recently was awarded a $7.5 million Indefinite Delivery/Indefinite Quality (IDIQ) contract by the U.S. Navy.

The contract is for design and consulting work at various Navy and Marine Corp facilities located primarily in California, as well as Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah.

According to James Robbins, AIA, principal and director of design, his firm has completed more than 100 delivery orders under various contracts, including design of the $30 million Explosive & Propellants Laboratory at the Naval Weapons Reserve in China Lake, Calif.

He said services outlined in the latest IDIQ contract include engineering studies and site investigations, preparation of requests for proposals for design-build projects as well as fully designed plans and specifications for various bid projects.

The general scope of the work is for the repair, renovation and new construction of bachelor enlisted quarters, laboratories, food services facilities, fitness centers, training and industrial facilities, to name just a few. Founded in 1992, RJC Architects, Inc. has worked on more than 300 projects with total construction value exceeding $1.1 billion.

With an emphasis on public and commercial work, the firm's design expertise and experience ranges from civic centers and college buildings to commercial offices and hotels. Some of its most recent projects include Coronado's new $30 million city hall and community center and the $31 million renovation of the historic Del Monte Hotel at the Naval Post Graduate School in Monterey, Calif., and the new $531 million San Diego County Operations Center.
